

SOUTH AFRICAN SHORE ANGLING ASSOCIATION

BYLAW G NATIONAL DRESS CODE

1. INTRODUCTION

- 1.1. In a professional international sporting environment, a National Team cannot only concentrate on team performance but also need to give attention to professional behaviour and appearances. It is not the achievement of a national team, nor their manners, nor the clothes that make them professional, but rather all those things together. The way an athlete dress makes a statement about the way the athlete sees the world and his or her place in it. Clothing has symbolic as well as practical value.
- 1.2. Many athletes believe in their individual right to freedom of expression and that discriminatory regulation in a Dress Code will restrict their rights. If a dress code is carefully drafted and based on the athlete's needs and is applied uniformly, it generally will not violate athlete's rights.
- 1.3. The same principles regarding professional behaviour, image and appearances shall also be applicable on the Angling Associations General Meetings and other official events. It is therefore also important setting a dress code to which delegates must comply.

2. REASONS FOR IMPLEMENTING A DRESS CODE

- 2.1. In international events with a great deal of interaction with other national teams and the public, an image is very important. Team Members who dress sloppily, wear revealing clothing or wear clothing with potentially offensive images or words will upset many people. This type of dress can also have a serious negative impact on the team and individual performance as well.
- 2.2. If a co-team member proves to be a distraction, the other team members will have a hard time concentrating on their sport. If there are problems with a particular athlete dressing badly or not maintaining proper hygiene, the option of applying a dress code for all team members is an easy, non-confrontational way of solving the problem.
- 2.3. The dress code introduces means aimed at regulating the use of National Colours by National Teams consistent with the SASCOC National Colours Regulations. This will prevent the misuse or abuse of National Colours and will generally promote the sport through the effective control of the use of National Colours, for that purpose to:
  - 2.3.1. Prohibit certain acts in relation to National Colours;
  - 2.3.2. Protect National Colours from abuse or misuse;
  - 2.3.3. Ensure professional behaviour and appearances; and
  - 2.3.4. Create uniformity in the National Teams of Member Federations / Associations representing South Africa.

3.3. Hand-over of national colours

To afford the necessary status to the award of national colours, Member Federations or Associations must arrange a proper handover function to which the Minister of Sport and Recreation and delegated representatives of SASCOC or member of the National Colours Board and SASACC are to be invited to hand over the national colours prior to the participation of the athletes. The Member Federation or Member Association must also hand to all recipients of national colours, a copy of the Code of Conduct to be signed, to ensure that sportsmen and sportswomen behave in a manner that befits their status when accepting national colours.

3.4. Use of National Emblem

No person or organization including members of the Colours Commission are entitled to the use of the national emblem in whatever form without the written approval of SASCOC. All national participation apparel and merchandising items must be approved by SASCOC. The national flag may not be used in conjunction/combined emblem with the King Protea emblem.

3.5. Member Colours

No Member Federation can use the King Protea or any combination thereof as member colours or for the purposes of awarding member colours. Subject to the requirements of the relevant International Federation, the national badge referred to above must be visibly displayed on the apparel, on the chest, on the left-hand side (right side looking at it). Sport activity leaders should also note of personal hygiene and participants should be encouraged to use clean clothing and footwear at all times.
